

Cooking with Katie

In this book, Katie told her dad all about the Pilgrims. The Pilgrims lived back in the 1600s. They wore different clothes than we wear today. For example, the men wore tall black hats with wide brims and square buckles.

With this recipe, you can make a small Pilgrim hat that you can actually eat! Ask a grown-up for permission, and be sure to wash your hands before you start.

Pilgrim Pride Cookies

*Makes 24 cookies

Ingredients:

- 24 shortbread striped cookies
- 12-ounce bag of chocolate chips
- 24 marshmallows
- a tube of yellow decorator's frosting

Other things you need:

- a cookie tray covered with waxed paper
- a medium microwave-safe bowl
- toothpicks

What you do:

1. Set the cookies with the striped-side down on the cookie tray. Space them apart.
2. Melt the chocolate chips in a microwave-safe bowl. Microwave for 1 minute. Stir. If the chips are not all melted, microwave an additional 30 seconds. Stir. Repeat until melted completely.
3. Pour the chocolate chips in the bowl. Microwave for 1 minute. Stir. If the chips are not all melted, microwave an additional 30 seconds. Stir. Repeat until melted completely.
4. For each one, stick a toothpick into a marshmallow, dip it into the melted chocolate, and then center it on top of a cookie.
5. With a second toothpick, lightly hold down the marshmallow. Carefully pull out the first toothpick.
6. Chill until the chocolate sets. Then use the decorator's frosting to add a small rectangle on the marshmallow near where it meets the cookie. It should look like the gold buckles on Pilgrims' hats.

Everyone will be thankful if you make these tasty treats for your Thanksgiving feast!
